

Guidelines for Special Selection for International Student Admission to April 2023 Master's Program of the Graduate School of Pharmaceutical Sciences, Kyoto University

The Master's program of the Graduate School of Pharmaceutical Sciences, Kyoto University (herein after "the Graduate School"), a two-year program, constitutes the first stage of the Graduate School's doctoral program established under Article 4 of the Standards for Establishment of Graduate Schools.

If the date or method of the examination is changed due to the spread of the new coronavirus infection, it will be posted on the Graduate School of Pharmaceutical Sciences website.

Philosophy and Admission Policy of the Graduate School of Pharmaceutical Sciences of Kyoto University

The Graduate School aims to create an unparalleled innovative center for scientific discovery and therapeutic (or medicinal) application by integrating the accumulated knowledge of various academic fields, thereby greatly contributing to human health and social development by promoting cutting-edge scientific researches toward drug discovery and pharmacotherapy. With regard to education, and from the foundation of bioethics, the Graduate School aspires to train and cultivate scholars who will become pharmaceutical researchers with the qualities and abilities needed to perform innovative researches as leaders in academia, pharmaceutical industry and medical institution. To this end, the Graduate School of Pharmaceutical Sciences of Kyoto University seeks to enroll students who have a keen desire to pursue truth, based on a commitment to independent original thinking, outstanding scholastic proficiency, versatility, and an appropriate ethical mindset. Together, these characteristics will enable these students to excel as future medical personnel.
